1.1. Course Description

The “Women’s Rights and Gender Equality” course constitutes an essential component of advanced legal education, contributing to the development of independent legal reasoning, democratic values, and a comprehensive professional outlook of future legal practitioners.

The course provides an in-depth analysis of international human rights standards related to women’s rights and gender equality, as well as the mechanisms for their implementation at both international and national levels. It examines the national human rights system, legislative development trends, and institutional reforms in the context of globalization and the evolution of the information society.

Particular emphasis is placed on the protection of vulnerable groups, prevention of gender-based discrimination and violence, and the integration of gender perspectives into legal and policy frameworks.

1.2. Prerequisites

Human Rights

1.3. Course Objectives

The course aims to develop students’ advanced understanding of women’s rights and gender equality within the framework of international and national law.

It further seeks to:

- enhance awareness of gender equality as a fundamental legal and social principle;
- provide a comprehensive understanding of international legal standards and their implementation mechanisms;
- develop analytical skills for assessing national legislation and policies;
- equip students with practical competencies to integrate gender perspectives into legal analysis, public policy, and institutional practices.

1.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of key concepts related to gender equality, including discrimination, gender stereotypes, gender quotas, and gender-based violence;
2. analyze international legal standards and core instruments governing women’s rights and gender equality;

3. evaluate national legislation and institutional mechanisms in the Republic of Uzbekistan from a gender equality perspective;
4. apply legal frameworks and mechanisms for the protection against gender discrimination and gender-based violence;
5. assess contemporary trends and best practices in gender policy at national and international levels;
6. conduct gender-sensitive legal analysis of legislation, policies, and social phenomena;
7. interpret and critically evaluate national and international legal instruments related to gender equality;
8. formulate evidence-based recommendations for integrating gender perspectives into legal and policy frameworks.

1.5. Independent Study and Assignments

Independent study and take-home assignments are designed to develop students' advanced research, analytical, and practical skills. These include individual work with primary and secondary legal sources, including international treaties and legal doctrine.

Assignments involve case analysis, essay writing, and the preparation of analytical presentations.

Individual Assignments

Students are required to complete five take-home assignments within the established deadlines. These tasks include:

- identifying and formulating research problems in international and gender law;
- selecting appropriate research methodologies and methods;
- conducting case studies, event analysis, content analysis, and system analysis;
- carrying out field-based or empirical research where applicable;
- preparing analytical outputs, including video and poster presentations.

All assignments must be submitted within the prescribed deadlines. Late submissions are not accepted and are not subject to resubmission.

3.1. Course Description

The “Customs Law” course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the fundamental principles, structure, and system of customs law. It focuses on the conceptual framework, legal nature, and institutional organization of customs regulation.

The course introduces students to the legal foundations of customs activity, including its role within the national legal system and its impact on economic, political, and social processes. It serves as a basis for further specialization in legal disciplines and contributes to the development of professional competencies required for legal practice in public authorities, customs bodies, law enforcement agencies, and legal services.

Particular attention is given to the interaction between customs law and international legal frameworks, as well as to the role of customs regulation in supporting economic reforms and international trade.

3.2. Prerequisites

No prerequisites are required for this course.

3.3. Course Objectives

The primary objective of the course is to equip students with a systematic understanding of the legal regulation of customs activity, including its institutional structure, regulatory mechanisms, and development trends.

The course further aims to:

- develop students’ ability to interpret and apply customs legislation;
- provide knowledge of the organization and functioning of customs authorities;
- enhance understanding of national legal frameworks and international agreements in the field of customs law;
- prepare students for professional legal activity and further academic specialization.

3.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of fundamental legal concepts, categories, and institutions relevant to customs law;
2. analyze the legal status of subjects of customs law and the structure of customs legal relations;
3. apply legal methods, including formal legal and comparative approaches, to the analysis of customs law issues;

4. evaluate the regulatory framework governing customs activity, including national legislation and international agreements;
5. conduct independent research and effectively process legal information from various sources to resolve professional legal problems;
6. interpret and apply customs law norms in practical legal situations;
7. assess the role of customs regulation in economic reforms and international trade processes;
8. develop professional communication skills in legal contexts, including the ability to construct reasoned legal arguments.

3.5. Independent Study and Assignments

I. Independent Study

Independent study is aimed at deepening students' knowledge and involves individual work with selected academic literature, including the preparation of glossaries, case analyses, analytical essays, and other written assignments.

The main requirements are as follows:

1. preparation of a glossary, case analysis, analytical essay, or similar assignments based on assigned literature;
2. evaluation criteria include independence, creativity (analytical reasoning, originality in problem-setting, and problem-solving orientation), and substantiation of arguments;
3. stylistic quality (academic literacy, clarity, coherence, and readability);
4. assignment requirements: length – 1200 words ($\pm 10\%$); font – Times New Roman; line spacing – 1.5; font size – 14;
5. logical structure and consistency of presentation.

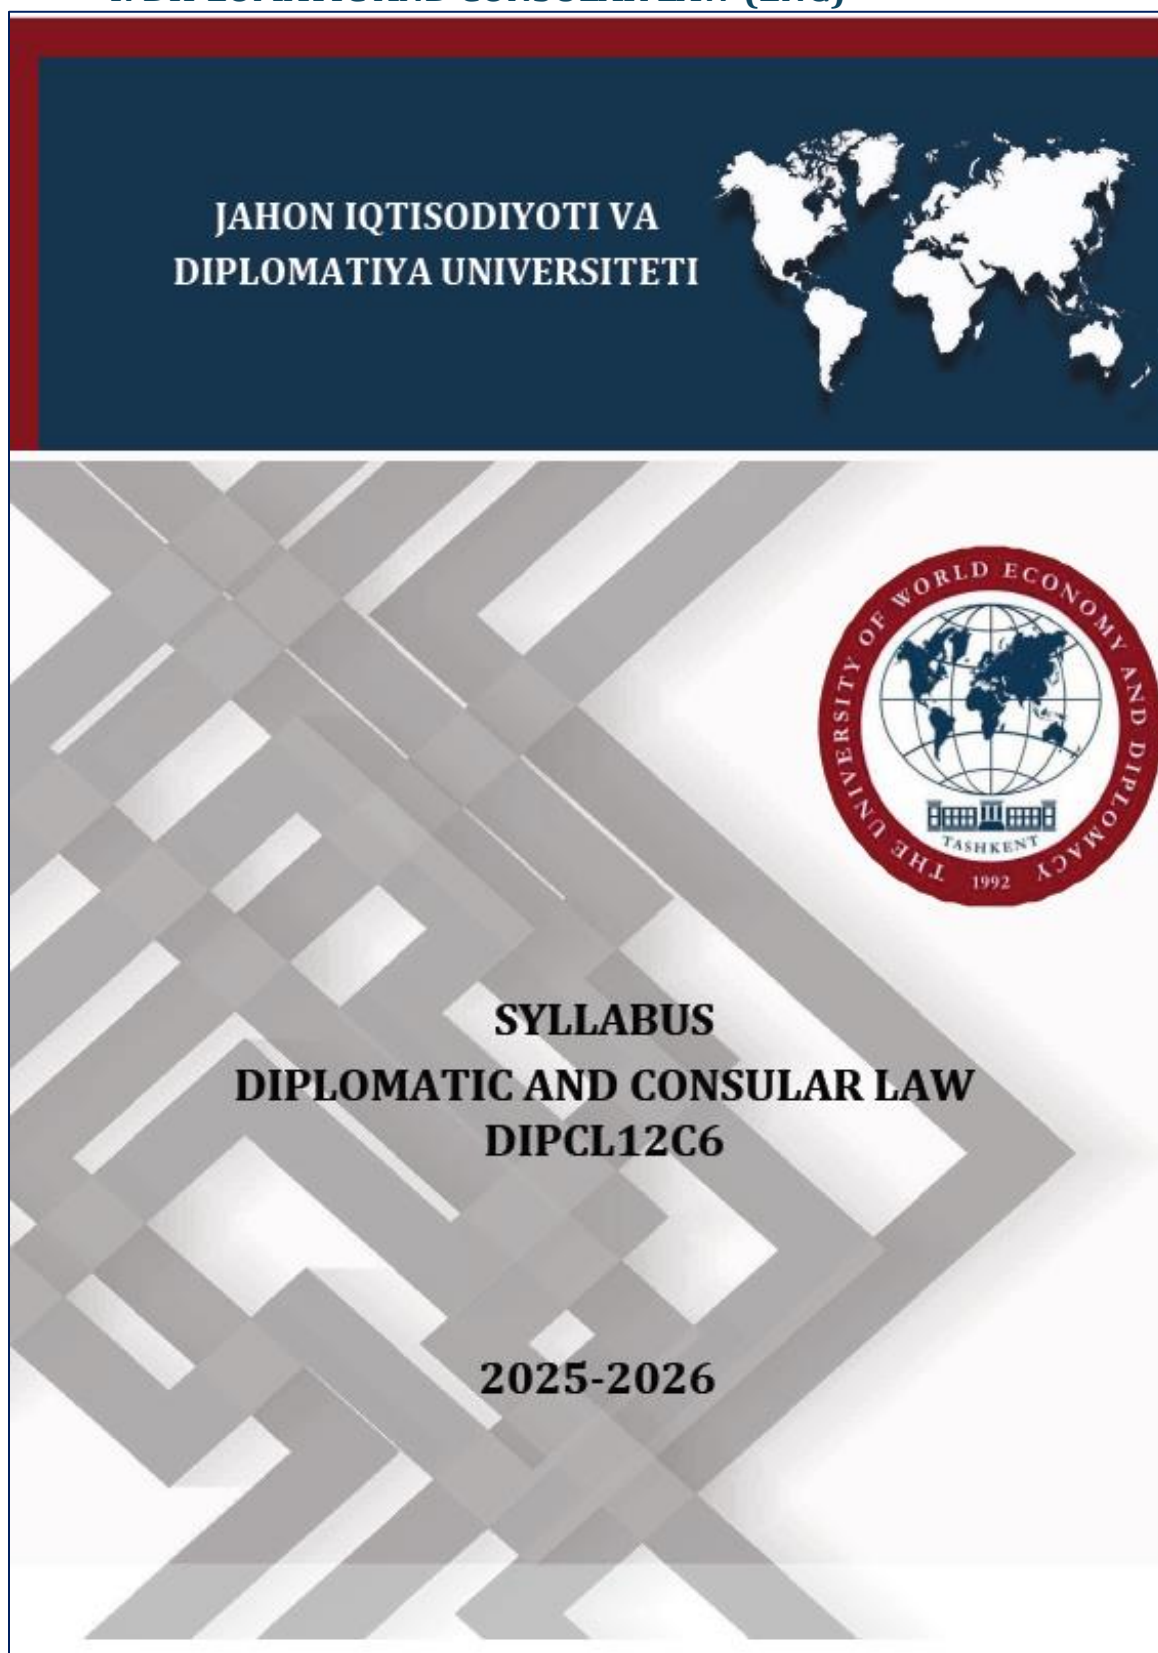

II. Individual Assignments

Students are required to complete five independent assignments within the established deadlines in the form of individual tasks. These include:

- identifying legal problems and determining their normative basis;
- selecting appropriate research methodologies and methods;
- conducting case analysis, content analysis, system analysis, and comparative legal analysis;
- preparing analytical materials, including video and poster presentations.

All assignments must be submitted within the prescribed deadlines. Late submissions are not accepted and are not subject to resubmission.

6.1. Course Description

The “Islamic Law” course provides a comprehensive introduction to the subject matter, object, and development of Islamic law. It examines the historical evolution of Islamic legal systems, their sources, and doctrinal foundations.

The course covers key aspects of Islamic law, including its primary sources (Qur’an, Sunnah, ijma, and qiyas), major schools of thought (madhhabs), as well as the distinction between Sunni and Shia legal traditions. It further explores the concept of statehood in Islam, and key areas such as Islamic criminal law and family law.

Particular attention is given to the analysis of contemporary legal systems influenced by Islamic law and the practical application of Islamic legal norms in modern states.

6.2. Prerequisites

No prerequisites are required for this course.

6.3. Course Objectives

The primary objective of the course is to develop students’ understanding of the formation of legal norms based on the primary sources of Islamic law, including the Qur’an, Sunnah, ijma, and qiyas, and their role in regulating social relations within Muslim societies.

The course further aims to:

- promote an understanding of justice, legal order, and the protection of rights and freedoms;
- examine the ethical and normative foundations of Islamic law;
- develop students’ ability to analyze Islamic legal principles within both historical and contemporary contexts.

6.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of the subject matter, concepts, and structure of Islamic law;
2. apply key legal concepts and categories of Islamic law in legal reasoning;
3. analyze the relationship between Islamic law and other branches of law;
4. evaluate the sources of Islamic law and the specific features of its legal norms;

5. assess the interaction and compatibility between Islamic law and international legal norms;
6. formulate legal solutions to complex issues based on Islamic legal principles;
7. analyze the role of Islamic law within contemporary systems of governance;
8. apply Islamic legal norms to the analysis of legal relations and case-based situations;
9. assess the practice of states applying Islamic law from a legal perspective;
10. apply primary sources of Islamic law to resolve specific legal situations.

6.5. Independent Study and Assignments

Independent study is aimed at developing students' research, analytical, and writing skills through written assignments within a rating-based assessment system.

Students are required to conduct independent research on legal questions or case-based problems and provide well-reasoned written solutions.

The main requirements are as follows:

1. preparation of an essay based on assigned academic literature;
2. evaluation criteria include independence, creativity (analytical reasoning, originality in problem-setting, and problem-solving orientation), and substantiation of arguments;
3. stylistic quality (academic literacy, clarity, coherence, and readability);
4. essay requirements: length – 1200 words ($\pm 10\%$); font – Times New Roman; line spacing – 1.5; font size – 14;

9.1. Course Description

The “Notarial Law” course examines legal relations arising in the course of performing notarial acts by notaries engaged in private practice, as well as by persons authorized by law to perform notarial functions.

A central focus of the course is the extra-judicial protection of subjective civil rights, including the legal nature and procedural rules governing notarial acts. The course provides a comprehensive analysis of both substantive and procedural components of notarial law.

Substantive norms define the legal status of notaries in the Republic of Uzbekistan, including their rights and obligations, as well as the role of state authorities and notarial chambers. Procedural norms regulate notarial proceedings and documentation processes.

Particular emphasis is placed on developing practical skills in drafting notarial documents and applying both substantive and procedural legal norms in professional practice.

9.2. Prerequisites

No prerequisites are required for this course.

9.3. Course Objectives

The course aims to provide students with fundamental and advanced knowledge of notarial law, ensuring a deep understanding of its conceptual framework and institutional structure.

It further seeks to:

- develop practical skills in drafting notarial documents;
- enhance students’ ability to interpret and apply legal norms in notarial practice;
- strengthen competencies in providing legal assessment and консультации in notarial matters.

9.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of the legal framework and principles of notarial law;
2. apply legal norms governing notarial activities to practical situations;
3. draft and formalize procedural and notarial documents in accordance with legal requirements;
4. analyze and qualify legal facts, documents, and circumstances in the context of notarial practice;

5. formulate written legal opinions and recommendations, including alternative legal solutions;
6. provide oral legal консультации based on sound legal reasoning and situational analysis;
7. analyze primary and secondary sources of notarial law, including legal doctrine and academic literature;
8. navigate and apply current legal sources regulating notarial activities.

9.5. Independent Study and Assignments

I. Independent Study

Independent study is aimed at deepening students' knowledge and involves individual work with essential and supplementary literature necessary for completing written assignments based on selected topics.

II. Requirements for Independent Work

Students are required to:

1. complete written assignments based on assigned literature;
2. demonstrate independence, creativity (analytical reasoning, originality in problem-setting, and focus on problem-solving), and substantiation of arguments;
3. ensure academic writing quality (clarity, coherence, and readability);

10.1. Course Description

The elective course “WTO Law” provides a systematic and in-depth examination of the legal framework governing the multilateral trading system under the auspices of the World Trade Organization. The course introduces students to the foundational principles, institutional structure, and normative sources of WTO law, including the covered agreements forming the WTO legal acquis.

Particular emphasis is placed on the principles of non-discrimination (most-favoured-nation and national treatment), transparency, predictability, and trade liberalization. The course further explores the internal decision-making processes of the WTO, including negotiation dynamics, consensus-based governance, and voting mechanisms where applicable.

A core component of the course is the detailed study of the WTO dispute settlement system, enabling students to critically analyze panel and appellate reports, assess legal reasoning, and understand enforcement mechanisms within the multilateral trading regime. Through case-based learning, students engage with real-world trade disputes and develop the ability to apply WTO law in practical contexts.

10.2. Prerequisite(s)

- Public International Law

This prerequisite ensures that students possess foundational knowledge of sources of international law, treaty interpretation, and the functioning of international organizations.

10.3. Course Objectives

The course aims to:

- provide a comprehensive understanding of the structure and functioning of WTO law within the broader system of international economic law;
- develop students’ ability to interpret and apply WTO agreements and jurisprudence;
- equip students with analytical tools necessary to assess global trade governance and dispute resolution mechanisms;
- foster research and legal writing skills relevant to international trade law practice.

10.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a systematic understanding of the principles, objectives, and institutional framework of the WTO and their impact on international trade relations;
2. Critically analyze the WTO legal framework, including multilateral trade agreements and their substantive provisions;
3. Apply WTO norms and jurisprudence to resolve complex international trade disputes and formulate legally sound arguments;
4. Conduct advanced legal research using primary sources (WTO agreements, panel and appellate body reports) and relevant scholarly literature;
5. Exercise critical thinking and problem-solving skills through case-based analysis of trade disputes;
6. Explain and evaluate WTO decision-making processes, including negotiation practices and consensus-building mechanisms;
7. Assess the effectiveness, challenges, and limitations of the WTO in regulating global trade;
8. Formulate and justify policy recommendations aimed at improving international trade governance within the WTO framework.

10.5. Performance Evaluation Tasks

Assessment Structure

- Class participation and assignments — 30%
- Mid-term examinations — 30%
- Final examination — 40%

Assessment methods are designed to evaluate students' doctrinal knowledge, analytical reasoning, research competence, oral advocacy, and written communication skills in line with ESG standards for student-centred learning.

Class Participation (30%)

Student performance is assessed based on active engagement, legal reasoning, and the ability to articulate arguments using appropriate legal terminology. The following formats are employed:

- Reading Task: Critical analysis and presentation of assigned WTO case law or academic materials;
- Discussion Task: Group-based examination of legal scenarios with structured questions;
- Presentation Task: Oral exposition of specific WTO legal concepts supported by doctrinal and practical examples;
- Group Work Task: Collaborative case analysis involving identification of legal issues and formulation of reasoned conclusions;

- Legal Debate Task: Structured adversarial discussions on controversial WTO-related issues, fostering argumentative and advocacy skills.

Mid-Term Examination (30%)

The mid-term assessment is conducted in the form of independent written assignments (take-home format) during Weeks 7 and 12.

Students are required to:

- analyze hypothetical or real WTO disputes;
- identify relevant legal issues and applicable WTO provisions;
- apply WTO jurisprudence to construct coherent legal arguments;
- provide well-reasoned conclusions supported by authoritative legal sources.

Final Examination (40%)

The final assessment is conducted as a research-based written paper or essay.

Students must:

- demonstrate comprehensive understanding of the full course content;
 - engage in advanced legal research using primary and secondary sources;
 - critically evaluate complex trade law issues;
 - present structured, persuasive, and well-substantiated legal arguments in accordance with academic writing standards.

12.1. Course Description

The course “International Humanitarian Law” (IHL) constitutes a core component in the professional training of legal specialists, providing a comprehensive and systematic understanding of the legal regime applicable in situations of armed conflict.

The course examines the fundamental principles, sources, and institutional framework of IHL, with particular emphasis on the protection of victims of armed conflicts and the regulation of the conduct of hostilities. It covers the normative structure of IHL, including treaty law (notably the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols) and customary international law.

Special attention is devoted to the classification of armed conflicts, the legal status of participants, the means and methods of warfare, and the interaction between IHL and international human rights law. The course also introduces students to the role and mandate of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement within the international humanitarian system.

Through a combination of doctrinal analysis and case-based learning, students develop the ability to interpret and apply IHL norms in contemporary conflict scenarios.

12.2. Prerequisites

- Public International Law

This prerequisite ensures foundational knowledge of international legal sources, treaty interpretation, and state responsibility.

12.3. Course Objectives

The course aims to:

- develop a comprehensive understanding of the legal framework governing armed conflicts;
- ensure students’ ability to interpret and apply IHL norms in practical situations;
- foster awareness of the necessity of compliance with international legal standards protecting victims of armed conflict;
- promote values of respect for human dignity, гуманность, and protection of vulnerable groups in accordance with international legal standards.

12.4. Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate systematic knowledge of the concept, предмет регулирования, principles, sources, and norms of international humanitarian law;

2. Identify the scope of application of IHL and determine the legal status of participants in international and non-international armed conflicts;
3. Analyze the interaction between IHL and international human rights law and assess their concurrent application in armed conflict situations;
4. Evaluate the legality of means and methods of warfare in light of IHL restrictions and prohibitions;
5. Apply rules on individual and state responsibility for violations of IHL, including war crimes;
6. Explain the structure, principles, and operational mandate of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement;
7. Critically assess contemporary challenges and trends in the application of IHL, including hybrid conflicts and technological developments;
8. Apply legal reasoning to real or hypothetical conflict scenarios using relevant IHL norms and jurisprudence.

12.5. Independent Study and Assignments

Independent study is an integral component of student-centred learning and is aimed at deepening doctrinal knowledge and developing research and analytical competencies.

General Requirements

Students are required to:

1. Prepare a glossary, analytical papers, and other written assignments based on prescribed literature;
2. Demonstrate independence, originality, and analytical depth in problem identification and argumentation;
3. Ensure clarity, coherence, and academic integrity in written work;
